The same way, nearly two decades ago, cybersecurity started to work its way into executives' daily lives, now ESG is on a similar track. Company leaders are now faced with supporting their organizations in addressing tangible risks associated with disclosure requirements, stakeholder's expectations and "shareholder activism". But what matters to the board... are they aligned with the company, or do they have other expectations and direction when it comes to these growing risks? Join us and listen to seasoned executive and board member Bavan Holloway share her candid perspective on what companies should be focusing on relative to ESG.
